This week in Reception...

☀ This Week in Reception: What makes me me, me?

This week, we have been exploring another wonderful story, "What makes me, me" We have enjoyed learning more about ourselves and what makes each of us unique and special.

Through stories, conversations, songs and creative activities, the children have been talking about their families, homes, likes and dislikes, feelings and special qualities. We have encouraged the children to share their ideas, listen to their friends and celebrate the things that make us all different.

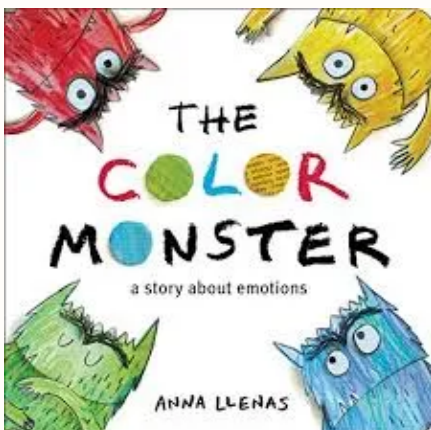

In Maths this week, we have been exploring sorting, matching and comparing through a range of fun, practical and engaging activities. The children have been developing their early mathematical thinking by learning to notice similarities and differences between objects. We have been sorting objects by different colours, shapes, sizes and features, encouraging the children to explain why they have grouped certain objects together. We have also enjoyed matching objects and pictures, developing our understanding of things that are the same, different or belong together.

In our Art area this week, the children have been busy creating collages, painting and drawing pictures of themselves and what makes them special. They have enjoyed talking about the people who are special to them and using their creativity to represent their families in their own unique ways.

Thank you to everyone who sent in family photos. It was lovely sharing these during our weekly input.
